

An ecosystem to nurture future business leaders

JIMS Rohini has a strong track record of getting its youngsters industry-ready

etpanache@timesgroup.com

Jagan Institute of Management Studies (JIMS) at Rohini, Delhi, is one of the preferred destinations for recruiters looking for competent and reliable technical manpower.

The institute, which is celebrating its silver jubilee year, has nurtured many corporate executives such as Deepak Sood, director, Barclays Capital; Kumar Nachiketa, V-P, Deloitte; Pankaj Sikka, associate director, E&Y; Saurabh Goel, national head, Hindustan Coca-Cola; Kumar Digvijay Singh, senior V-P, Yes Bank; Inderpreet Kaur, country head, Royal Bank of Scotland and many more.

Other noteworthy alumni include Vivek Singh Sidhu (2008 batch), who started an animation film studio, and Gaurav Vashisht (2006 batch), who runs his own e-commerce venture.

The JIMS's alumni are placed at various levels in firms such as Deloitte, Ernst & Young, AC Nielsen, McKinsey, Nestle, Colgate-Palmolive, ITC, Moody's Analytics, CEAT, Accenture, Goldman Sachs, etc.

Senior corporate executives are also involved in designing the programme structure, curriculum development and mentoring. Raj Sharma, head exports, Nestle India, P Madan, director, Mitsubishi Corporation, and MA Mateen, senior V-P, Berger Paints, are members of the institute's academic council.

According to Rajiv Mitra, MD and CEO, Govind Milk, the students from JIMS Rohini have been among their best campus hires. G Venkat, head (North India), channel category, Nestle India, also applauded their performance.

To promote entrepreneurship, JIMS has set up an incubation centre to assist students in incubating their ideas into a commercially viable venture.